If an enriched design be desired, it can be produced with perfect facility, and made to record, with the finest effect, the victor s exploits, after the manner of Trajan s coluirtn, and other admired monuments. The capital might even be adorned by electro-gilding. The electro-metallorgic art might be employed by itself to produce many sculptural works tclmly in copper. Until now the great expense of peculiar glyptographic monuments has proved a prohibitory bar to their employment, independently of all constructive difficulties; but every objection on this score is now removed by an admirable process, that will ere long hold a prominent rank among the arts. Great has been the lament of many at our inability to vie with the Egyptians in their litho-graving works. So numerous and consummately chiselled were they, as to baffle the imagination...
