Brand New Book  Print on Demand .Excerpt from Electromagnetic Radiation and the Mechanical Reactions, Arising From It, Being an Adams Prize Essay in the University of Cambridge The subject proposed for the Adams Prize in 1908 was The Radiation from Electric Systems or Ions in Accelerated Motion and the Mechanical Reactions on their Motion which arise from it. This also happened to be the subject-matter of several investigations which I had carried out from time to time as preliminaries to a number of papers published in the Philosophical Magazine and other journals; advantage was taken of the opportunity then afforded to collect these investigations together and to extend them. The time available for this purpose however proved to be too short for a full treatment of the whole subject; while Radiation was discussed pretty fully, the Mechanical Reactions had to be dismissed very briefly. During the interval which has elapsed since the award of the prize in 1909, the treatment of the latter part of the subject has been extended so as to complete the original program; I venture to hope that there has been sufficient improvement in the essay to justify the delay in publication which has arisen. In order to avoid any great change in the form of the essay most of the additional matter has been introduced in seven Appendices, and the alterations in the original text have been confined to extensions of two problems already included in it, but somewhat scantily treated. The first problem deals with the motion of a ss-particle in a uniform electric field, Ch. XI, 151 - 154, and the second with the electromagnetic field generated by this motion, Ch. V, 43 - 60.
