It is no secret our current education system is failing. We all know the statistics of high school and college dropouts and test scores that leave students unprepared to tackle the challenges they will confront both in the classroom and in the workplace. Secretary Duncan, I want to reiterate my appreciation for your ongoing efforts to reach across the aisle and across town for the betterment of the Nations classrooms. Although we may not see eye to eye on all things, you and I share a belief that the current system is broken and is in desperate need of repair. As we continue working on reforms that focus on what is best for students, parents, teachers, and communities, we must first answer a fundamental question: What is the proper role of the Federal Government in education Despite the near tripling of overall per-pupil funding since 1965, national academic performance has not improved. Math and reading scores have largely gone flat, graduation rates have stagnated, and researchers have found serious shortcomings with many Federal education programs. Additionally, the volume of rules and reporting requirements associated with Federal spending has skyrocketed. During a recent hearing in this committee, we learned from school officials and local leaders that the regulatory burden created by Federal spending often outweighs any potential benefits. The Race to the Top, while well intended, has exacerbated this tension, leaving schools and States even more frustrated with Federal intervention. The Departments activism in higher education is also...
