Brand New Book ***** Print on Demand *****.Excerpt from State Normal Magazine, Vol. 22: June, 1918 The students are thinking about world affairs and are expressing their patriotism at home. They are taking over some of the work of men about the place, who are no longer about the place. They volunteered to mow the campus for commencement. They had set apart for each class certain afternoons and certain sections of the campus for keeping them cleaned up. Following commencement, ten girls started work for the summer on the college farm, while the rest are going out into the state to do serious, constructive work during their vacation. Thus have we changed, thus have we grown. But the listening ear of the modern spirit is still bent down close over the strings on which the college spirit finds expression, and is still testing, testing to see if it will ring true. We have not yet found ourselves, and the world is still expectant. The cry has gone up all over the country for War Gardens and everywhere, people are answering. Shouldering a hoe and firmly clutching a bag of seed, each is marching into a certain backyard or vacant lot, there to work a transformation. The backyards and vacant lots have never before dreamed of anything the a garden - but neither have the gardeners. And so the backyard and the prospective gardener start bravely to work while the neighbors lean over the fence and offer multitudinous suggestions, are cordially hated by the farmer because of their utter uselessness. Recently, however, a brand new useful aggregate of advices and suggestions which have the ring of truth in them have developed and been scattered broadcast...
