At present only a few ruins attest the former existence of the celebrated Nisibis. This at least is the account of Rousseau, who visited it in 1812. (See also note 38.) (13) By the King of Greece is meant the Emperor of Constantinople. The Hebrew having no term for emperor, Petachia used the word generally rendered king. (14) The rabbi here describes Mosul under the name of New Nineveh. That the whole land of Nineveh is black like pitch, is an exaggeration, nor are there any traces of a forest having existed in the same neighbourhood.--A. Benjamin calls Mosul Ashur. (15) Although in general opposed to conjectural emendation yet we cannot resist the temptation of suggesting a slight alteration in the reading...
