By F. R. Todd. Printers Ink Jan l. 20 p. 100. 2300 words Proper use of the farm press will increase sales, eliminate price-cutting and stabilize conditions. After the armistice when stocks of farm machinery refused to move because farmers anticipated lower prices, a pamphlet Riving the real facts was sent broadcast thruout the farm press. An immediate change in attitude was evidenced--farmers commenced to talk to dealers: dealers commenced to talk to traveling men; stocks commenced to move from factories and branch houses; factory schedules were increased. The farm paper should carry in its editorial columns accurate, reliable information and should not mention specific brands--a practice which happily has been practically eliminated. Farm papers should do everything in their power, thru their editorial columns, to promote the growth of the home town since the value of the farm bears a direct relation to the size of the town.
